SCOTT SCHLIEP JOINS PROXIMAL SECURITY AS VICE PRESIDENT

January 8, 2009 (Henderson, Nevada) - Proximal Security named Scott Schliep to its leadership team. As vice president, Schliep will apply his decades of security leadership to directing all aspects of Proximal Security.

“My extensive background with varied aspects of security within the United States Army, in addition to my experience in the private sector will help me to establish Proximal’s reputation as a forward-thinking and effective security company,” Schliep said.

Prior to joining Proximal Security, Schliep spent a decade working his way up ADT Security Services, where a series of leadership and management promotions culminated with his post as area sales manager for Southern California and Nevada. In addition, he spent five years as vice president of Seattle’s Northwest Protective Service, Inc., where he provided security services to international air, deep water port and government facilities.

Much of his training comes from duties in the United States Army, where he served as deputy commander of a 520-member law enforcement organization, as well as a crime prevention officer in Europe and physical security officer responsible for nuclear security operations.

Schliep received his Master’s of Science degree in International Relations from Troy State University’s European campus, and a Bachelor’s of Science degree in Criminal Justice from San Jose State University. He’s also an honor graduate of the U.S. Army Command and General Staff Officer College.

Based in Henderson, Nevada with multiple manufacturing plants, Proximal Security (<http://www.proximalsecurity.com>) is a business-to-business company producing and marketing the latest in security and surveillance technology products directly to distributors, security companies and other businesses around the world through its sales team and online catalog.
